ITALIANS TAKE LAND AS YUGOSLAVS COLLAPSE

The Fascists continued their occupation of the Dalmatian coast from two directions. The troops that had seized Split in the spring of 1941, under the command of General von Mackensen, advanced along the coast towards Split in April. At the beginning of May, they had reached Split and captured it. The Italian army then began to withdraw to avoid being encircled by the advancing Yugoslav forces.

Later the High Command issued this communiqué:

In retaliation for the British air raid on the residential and cultural section of the capital, the British capital in a 30-hour rolling attack. The port and the immediate surroundings were subjected to an intense bombardment.
