

No Guards, No Uniforms Mr. King Comes to Town

By H. R. ARMSTRONG

Premier King came to Toronto today in simplest democratic style to address the A.F. of L. convention. He was accompanied by only two hard-working secretaries. His car stood for hours unguarded, almost unnoticed, at a Union station siding.

There were no uniforms in the premier's party, no police inside the car or out, no military or political big-wigs with him.

William Jenoves, chairman of Toronto District Trades and Labor council, and J. W. Buckley, secretary of that organization, went to the prime minister's car to greet him and walk with Mr. King to the convention hall.

In the tunnel on the way to the hotel a railwayman, in blue denim overalls from toe to shoulder, bowed deferentially to the premier. Mr. King reached out and grabbed the greasy hand of the surprised but delighted workman. "Good morning, glad to see you," smiled the prime minister as he shook hands.

Delegates to the convention gave Mr. King a rousing welcome of loud applause as they stood in his honor on his arrival. The prime minister chatted for a few moments with William Green, A.F. of L. chieftain, until it was time for him to address the gathering.

His address was interrupted a number of times by rouds of applause. At the conclusion, the 1,000 delegates and guests stood and applauded for nearly five minutes.
